THE Richmond Dispatch of Sunday prints diagrams of the First, never grow into material form. It Second and Third Congressional dis- says: tricts as they would be under the proposed changes of the redistricting bills of Messrs, Cumming and Baker, and winds up with this comment in favor of the Cumming bill:

"It (the Baker bill) would make the first district less compact than the Cumming bill. Whatever criticisms may be made of the Cumming bill, it certainly makes the five districts of the eastern half of the State more compact. The maps submitted herewith show this at a glance. There is, nevertheless, considerable opposition in the First district to the proposed changes.'
